100,000 in Paris Watch Bastille Day Parade

PARIS, July 14 (IHT).—As part of its policy to democratize some institutions, France today staged its traditional Bastille Day parade through the proletarian quarter of the Place de la Bastille instead of along the elegant Champs-Elysées.

The parade of 13,046 men and 216 women, 260 horses and a dozen army guard dogs filed past crowds estimated by the police at 100,000. The crowd was especially large oear the Place de la Bastille, where the French Revolution began in 1789 with an attack on the prison near that site.

In a message to mark France's national day, President Valery Giscard d'Estaing said he had changed the site to "bring the people closer to their army, so those .who defend our liberty and security."

"The holiday must return to the idea of liberty, a holiday of the people," the President said.

The change has caused some controversy, and newspaper polls showed that most Frenchmen opposed it. The only other July 14: parade to be held at the Bastille took place in 1945; the traditional site since 1919, when the parade was moved from the Bois de Boulogne.

The usual tanks were absent today so the army could save 50,000 gallons of gasoline. The usual fly-past was reduced, although 36 jets roared overhead, six streaming blue, white and red smoke for France's colors.

The loudest applause went to units of firemen, the army dogs, the women and the Foreign Legion, which traditionally closes the parade, its members marching slowly in uniforms inchiding leather aprons.

WASHINGTON, July 14 (NYT)... -President Nixon has come to the support of Secretary of State Henry Kissinger with a letter to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee taking full responsi-bility for the wiretapping of 17 officials and newsmen between 1969 and 1971.

Sen. William Pulbright, chairman of the committee, which has begun an investigation of Mr. Kissinger's role in the wiretanping, confirmed yesterday that he had received the letter Friday night

He declined to make it public before the rest of the committee had seen it, but he said the letter was a clear and "positive statement" hy Mr. Nixon justifying the wiretap program on the grounds of national security and stating that he had ordered that the program be instituted to get to the source of news leaks at the

In a statement issued on May 22, 1973, Mr. Nixon, noting that there had been leaks of national security information in 1969, said that "a special program" of wire-taps was instituted. "I authorized this entire program, Mr. Nixon said then, "Each individual tap was undertaken in accordance with procedures legal at the time and in accord with long-standing precedent,"

Mr. Kissinger, in public oews conferences, as well as during his confirmation hearings last September before the Foreign Relations Committee, insisted that his role in the wiretapping was to provide the names of members of his National Security Council staff who had access to the information being leaked.

He has also said that some members who had compromising information in their security files were tapped as well as those whose names arose during taps on others. The Poreign Relations Committee last September said it found nothing in its inquiry into Mr. Kissinger's activities, including the wiretapping, to bar him as secretary of state.

The committee was created by a Senate vote of 77-0 on Feb. 7, 1973. The resolution establishing the committee gave it full investigative powers and wide latitude to examine the 1972 presidential election, the Watergate break-in and cover-up and any relevant matters.

Watergate Panel Senators Differ on Guilt, Other Issues WASHINGTON, July 14 (AF).

-Within the framework of a unanimously endorsed final report, the members of the Senate Watergate committee express some widely differing opinions on subjects ranging from where guilt lies to how political campaigns should be reformed. Six of the committee's seven members included their individual views near the end of a threevolume report made public yesterday. The only one who did D-Ga., who said he had "nothing to add." In keeping with the findings of the main document, there is no assertion that President Nixon was directly involved in either the Watergate affair itself or the subsequent cover-up. But the committee chairman, Sam Ervin jr., D-N.C., left no doubt that he feels Mr. Nixon bears some responsibility, saying that Watergate was "not invented by enemies of the Nixon administration or even by the news media.' "On the contrary," Sen. Ervin wrote, "Watergate was perpetrated upon America by White House and political aides, whom President Nixon himself had entrusted with the management of his campaign for re-election to the presidency." Sen. Edward Gurney, R-Fla.,

widely regarded as the President's chief defender among committee members, pointedly declared that the question of who was responsible for putting the Watergate plan into operation and who knew about it and when, is in

"In my opinion there has been no proof gathered by the committee to indicate that the President of the United States participated in or approved of the planning or had advance knowledge of the break-in," Sen. Gur-"The testimony and docu-

In my opinion, the evidence gathered by the committee does not indicate that the President had knowledge of the cover-up until March. Sen. Howard Baker jr., R-Tenn., the committee's vice-chairman and senior Republican, says that questions left unanswered include "what the President or other individuals knew or when they knew it." The strongest criticism is hy Sen. Lowell Weicker jr., R-Conn., whose 142-page individual report, released earlier, calls Waterwate "not a whodunit," but "a documented, proven attack on laws. institutions and principles" by the executive branch. Sen. Baker called the disclosure of the White House taping system the most notable discovery in the committee hearings, adding that "I am not sure I understand why the tape recording facilities were installed, but I find the practice objectionable and not in keeping with the grandeur of the presidency."

He recommended that Congress consider outlawing all such activity without express prior consent of all participants or careful court supervision. Sen. Weicker urged outlawing "all forms of domestic electronic surveillance, uncluding wiretapping." Sen. Gurney praised the com-

MALKIYA, Israel. July 14 (NYT).-The dense coils of concertina wire are studded with tiny raror blades and rooted to the ground by iron stakes. The 12-foot-high hurricane fence is alive with electric warning devices and topped with strands of barbed wire.

Both are heing strung for 50 miles across the length of Israel's northern frontier as part of a major new defensive system designed to scal the Lebanese border against infiltration by Arah guerrillas.

Work on the elesborate new fence began two months ago and is expected to take several more weeks to complete. Similar obstacles are already in place along the Syrian and Jordanian borders. The objective, according to Israeli military sources, is to make it as difficult and as dangerous as possible for small guerrila units to cross from their bases in southern Lebanon into northern Israel. Four such squads have made it in the last three months and 51 Israelis have died in the ensuing attacks on civilian settlements.

We realize it's impossible to seal the border completely." an Israell major who commands the frontier force near this border kibbutz told a visitor recently. "But this fence will at least slow a terrorist down. If the system works properly, we'll be able to kill him before he manages to cut his way through."

The decision to go ahead with the construction of the fence was made shortly after the guerrilla attack on Kiryat Shemona on April 11 in which 18 Israelis were killed. The three guerrillas who carried out that assault simply climbed over the six-foot chainlink fence that existed along the border at the time and made their way into the town before their tracks were discovered.

To accomplish the same thing today, the guerrillas would have to cut their way through as much as 12 yards of densely colled concertina wire. Russians Chide Japan Over U.S. Okinawa Bases

MOSCOW, July 14 (NYT). The Soviet Army newspaper Red Star chided Japan today for contiming to permit the operation of U.S. bases and aerial recon-naissance units on Okinawa. The article appeared to be an indirect response to a request by the Japanese Foreign Ministry on Priday that the Soviet Union cancel a shelling and bombing exercise scheduled to begin tomorrow in waters near Japan. Tokyo has informed Soviet authorities that the projected target practice would pose serious prob-iems for Japanese fishing vessels and other ships. Earlier, the Russians had notified Japan that serial hombing practice would be conducted in the Okholsk Sea and Gulf of Tartary July 15 to Aug. 15, and that artillery practice would be beld off the Siberian coast July

The article in Red Star, clearly intended to reduce the moral force of the Japanese complaint, also seemed aimed at encouraging Japanese and Okinawan critics of the American presence on the island to push for the removal of the bases.

Senate Aide's Visit to Cuba Points Up Crisis in U.S. Policy

By David Binder

The Nixon administration has. lost control of the U.S. policy of maintaining a political and economic quarantine against Cuba, in the opinion of government officials, specializing in Latin American affairs:

Pat Holt, the staff director of the Senste Foreign Relations mittee, who met with Premier Fidel Castro in Hayana yester-day is also understood to believe that Mr. Castro and others in Latin America have begun to determine the pace and direction of Cuba's breakout from hemisphere isolation. The meetings Mr. Holt had with

Premier Castro and other Cuban leaders including Blas Roca, a member of the governing Communist party secretarist and Carlos Rafzel Rodrigues, first dep-uty premier—are being viewed here and in Latin America as an important signal, perhaps even a breakthrough. The course of U.S. policy twolating Cuba began in January. 1961, when the Eisenhower ad-1961, when the Elsenhows administration broke diplomatic ties with Havana over what it considered provocations by the Castro government. A year later, the Organization of American States voted to "exclude Cuba from the inter-American system." In July, 1964, the Organization of American States, following Washington's policy, voted that member states should break diplomatic and trade ties with Cuba. All but Mexico complied.

The Latins are petriffed at not being on the bandwagon. Now, instead of being the bad boy on the block as in the 1960s, there is a turnsbout and they are coming to Casiro."

Mr. Echeverria has stated in recent news conferences that one of the aims of his Latin American tour is to persuade other bemisphere governments to 'lift the blockade against Cubs," that the OAS adopted in 1964.

Sen. Humphrey was asked to answer questions about the matter, but sent a letter saying that he did not know anything about it.

The same dairy co-op donated corporate money to Sen. Hum-phrey's 1968 presidential campaign and allegedly did so again in his 1970 Senate race. The report did not deal with these payments because the committee's inquiry was limited to the 1972 presidential election.

The committee's investigators found that Sen. Humphrey used $86,000 in stock and $23,000 in cash from his own funds in the campaign, and originally said that these donations apparently violated the old federal law against campaign gifts of more than $5,000 each. Central to the Mideast

While there are contradictions in recent Israeli statements on the problem of the Palestinians—the information minister saying that direct negotiations were possible on terms most Palestinians considered impossible, while the Prime Minister prefers to regard Jordan as the Palestinian surrogatethere seems to be a growing acceptance in Jerusalem of the fact that this is the central problem of the area.

Israel is not aione in this recognition of the chief obstacle to peace. Many other states have done so, in one official or unofficial form, and the Palestine Liberation Organization, headed by Yassir Arafat, has profited thereby. Most Arab countries regard the organization as the Palestinian spokesman; the Caracas conference on law of the sea has granted it observer status. and the Soviet Union is expected to give it official blessing. Even the United States is itself. cautiously taking initiatives in the direction of the Palestinians.

The reason why the Palestinians are looming on the Mideast's clouded horizon is starkly simple. For other Arabs, it can be argued that their national interests are primarily concerned with Israel's boundaries. They have moved however grudgingly. toward acknowledging the fact of Israel and could, without serious sacrifices in territory or prestige, adapt to that fact. But for the Palestinians, it is the fact itself, the land on which Israel has been huilt, the state and the society that have been constructed there, that are the issue.

When the United Nations carved Israei out of Palestine in 1948, it was intended to re-Meet some demographic reality and was, in consequence, a topographical monstrosity. This, of course is typical of attempts to secure a measure of national justice by drawing lines on maps, from the Polish corridor and Ulster down to the partition of India, and as in all of those instances, good intentions paved a good many acres of the hell that is war. Israei formally accepted its weird boundaries-the Arabs refused to accept Israel and thus enabled that state to redraw the boundaries by force. Those boundaries are in dispute, and some of the disputes are knotty for more peoples than the Palestinians—the fate of Jerusalem, for example. But beyond that is the far more troublesome question of whether the Arab Paleatinians, as a people, are to have their own state; what its borders and character will be, and how individual Palestinians are to be compensated for lands within Israel

It is most unlikely that Israel will be able to settle all of this by an agreement with Jordan, which claims most of what would be included in an independent Palestine. On the other hand, it would not be much of a peace that was based on a Palestinian nation which still hoped to destroy Israel. The latter must he prepared to live with a Palestinian republic, which in turn must be prepared to live with Israel; neither can afford to commit itself to a future of irridentas; both must be ready to cooperate economically and in the suppression of their own extremists. And given the high emotions which each foot of the holy land of Jews, Christians and Moslems inspires, such a solution will require at least another Kissinger miracle if it is to be consummated.

Booming Arms Trade

The world economy may be heading for needed at home to help damp down inflaa slump, but the international arms trade is booming. The world market leader in this unsavory competition is the United States which, in the fiscal year that ended last month, sold some $8.5 billion in arms, almost doobling its sales in a single year. About $7 billion of the American weapons were sold in the Middle East and Persian Gulf

Other industrial countries are also stepping up their sales. The Soviet Union appears on its way to boosting its arms exports from $2 billion to $8 billion. Other Communist countries in Eastern Europe are likely to sell about $1 billion worth of weapons this year, and the Western European capitalist countries should be good for about $3 billion.

Various justifications for American partictoation in and, indeed, leadership of this arms race have been advanced. On the economic side, the basic argument is that the enormous traffic in arms is good for the United States balance of payments, particularly at a time when the bills for imported oil are rising steeply and when a greater sopply of food and other resources is

This superficial argument ignores the question whether shipment of increasing amounts of sophisticated military hardware to the world's most troubled areas is the only or the best means of dealing with an adverse balance of payments. It would make far more sense, from the standpoint of this country and all those dependent on imported oil, to force down the price of oil, rather than for the United States, France. Britain or the few others who could do so to try to cover their oil bills with ever greater export of lethal weapons to the oil prodocers and others.

An arms race as the solution to the world's economic imbalances will appear more lonatic as time goes on and simply cannot be a lasting solution. Eventually, if equilibrium is to be restored to the world economy, there must be needed adjustments of commodity prices and currency values, new recycling arrangements for investment, shifts in foreign trade, conservation in use and development of alternative energy resources. Massive arms sales are an extremely hazardous -and limited-stopgap answer to the problem of regaining world economic equilibrium.

Hazardous Diplomacy

From a foreign policy standpoint, defenders of American arms sales argue that if this country does not supply the arms, other countries—the Soviet Union and France, for example-will do so. There surely is some truth to this argument; but it also may be dangerously self-delusive, depending on the specific circumstances of particular arms sales. Selling hage quantities of sophisticated military equipment to another country-which may decide to exercise its sovereign right to use that equipment-represents an important foreign-policy decision for the United States. If a nation receiving American weapons uses them in warfare with its neighbors, the issue of resupplying that nation quickly arises. The United States may in effect be committed to one side in the war if it does resupply or to the other side if it does not.

These are circumstances in which this risk is consciously taken as an act of deliberate policy, but it appears that major arms deals also are made by the Pentagon on a virtually ad hoc basis without adequate policy

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Congress has been insufficiently alert to this danger and careless about arms sales in general. At the week's session of the Senate Appropriations subcommittee dealing with arms sales, not a single member of the committee was present except its chairman. Senator Inouve.

The fundamental answer to the question whether the United States should or should not be leading the quantitative and qualitative world arms race cannot be found in a narrow, nationalist framework. The solution lies in a continuing, determined international effort to check and reverse the stead? increase in world armaments and the correspondingly increasing danger of war. But, far from pushing in that direction, powerful interest groups in this and other countries are pressing for ever greater production and shipment of armaments, essentially the most wasteful possible use of the world's social, economic and natural resources.

International Opinion

The British Economy

It tries to cure our problems by making us poorer for a start-a lack of growth of one per cent means a loss in Britain's wealth of about £400 million a year. This is the wrong policy and especially at a time when the oil crisis urgently requires an expansion of international trade if we are to avoid a cara-strophic world slump and immense human disasters in the developing countries. It is sheer folly, as Mr. Wilson said in a notable speech to the Socialist International, to aliow world trade to be cut back now by the $60 billion "tax" that the oil-producing countries have exacted in higher prices.

By way of contrast, the equivalent of a depression hovers nerrously over other lands (although the word itself is rarely used) a wave of inflation is bewildering the politics and production of the West and threatening to cripple its middle class.

All kinds of unorthodox currency and payments methods, from Eurodollars to special drawing rights, have enormously swolien the amount of money available, thus pressing prices ever upward and making the prospects of monetary reform ever harder.

All this has produced varying reactions and has tended to incite more international rivalry than cooperation. divided; and it is also in the over, when it does come, its real process of changing shape. The worth is less than its statistical process of changing shape. The Common Market is increasingly led by a Franco-German axis, at the expense of Britain, which hasn't made up its mind just where it belongs. There is still inadequate cooperation between the transatlantic allies.

Everywhere there are little hints of economic trouble. The United States finds it can't produce enough enriched uranium to fuel the nuclear reactors it is hawking to foreign lands. This global time of troubles comes when many nations were about to change their traditional orientation. Norway is on the verge of basing its future on a petroleum economy because of the North Sea oil discoveries.

Britain is preparing for a similar shift to an industry fueled by oil, not coal, and more continental, less overseas trade. Holland is moving to natural gas for energy. France, followed hy West Germany, races to develop its nuclear power.

Atomic electricity is moving ahead relatively more rapidly in Western Europe than the United States. On this side of the Atlantic electric production is nationalized or more centrally controlled and can take decisions more easily for purely economic reasons. Also, there has until now been far greater reliance on imported fuel than in America,

An even bigger question is whether the straitened circum-stances of today's prosperous countries will cause them to shut their eyes to the tragedy of the hungry poor around them. If adequate answers are not found —and soon enough—it is logical to expect: that those who suffer the consequences will look with increasing interest at the monolithic Marrist systems. Those, while zigidly controlled with respect to human rights, arc at the same time free of today's ominous curses, famine among the poor, inflation among the rich, diminished energy supplies

Ehrlichman and Nixon

By James Reston

WASHINGTON. - The conviction of John Ehrlichman for conspiracy and perjury in the case of Daniel Elisberg's psychiatrist-though it will be appealedis regarded here as highly significant for two main reasons

First, it rested in part on the principle that an official is responsible for the acts of his subordinates if he approved in general an illegal plan and even he did not approve of specific acts of burglary under that plan. Second, it sustained Judge Gerhard Gesell's principle that even good motives do not justify illegal acts. ment official may or may not do and, if sustained, are likely to make White House aides much more cautious in the future about authorizing dubious practices regardless of their motives. And they bear indirectly on the continuing impeachment inquiry in the case of President Nixon.

A Distinction

Here a distinction has to be made between the Ehrlichman case and the Nixon case. Ehrlichman approved in writing a "covert operation" to examine Dr. Fielding's files on Elisberg's psychiatric record, provided that operation was "not traceable." There is no such evidence that President Nixon did the same

Nevertheless, the Judiclary Committee's transcript of a March 22, 1973, conversation between the President and John Mitchell does dent did know about the cover-up of illegal acts, or did not "take care that the laws are faithfully executed" but conspired to, and did obstruct justice by suggesting that his sides avoid telling the

In that conversation, the President, according to the Judiciary Committee's transcript of the tapes, suggested a flexible policy of giving some information to the Senate Watergate committee "in order to get on with the cover-up

Later, in the same conversation, the long Nixon-Mitchell exchange, which the President personally directed should be cut out of the transcripts he made public on April 30, Nixon is quoted as saying (skipping his bernyard language): "I want you all to stonewall it, let them This suspected aides] plead the Fifth Amendment, cover up or anything else, if it'll save the plan, that's the whole thing."

In short, the President, according to this passage, clearly knew in general about the cover-up, which was an obstruction of justice and, if tolerated by the President, a violation of his oath to take care that the laws are faithfully executed," and if Ehrlichman's conviction is sustained on the basis of his general approval of a "covert operation." then the President is in even deeper trouble as being a party to a specific crime.

The psychological effect of the Ehrlichman conviction on the Judiciary Committee and the members of the House and Senate is probably more important than anything else. The President and his lawyer are saying that to These are just a few specific impeach and convict, you have to find clear evidence that Nixon instances behind the dismal record of Mr. Nixon. Those of personally, and intentionally, committed a high crime, prove him unequirocally to be a grock, or to use the vivid but offensive common phrase, 'find the smok-ing gun' in his hands.

In the Ehrlichman case, judge and jury said something far less than this could be a crime: "You didn't have to catch Phrtichman rifling Dr. Fielding's files in order to convict him. Or even prove that he said, 'Go burgle his office and get the files." Even if he thought it was okay to mount a "covert operation" fust so it wesn't "tracesble" Gesell said that was enough to Key figures in the House Judiciary Committee, like Rep. Thomas Rallsback, R-III, have been edging toward the argument that the test of impeachment is not one of finding the "smoking gun" but the wider test of general knowledge of crime, and now the conviction of Enrichmen has greatly strengthened his position.

Decisive Factor

In their slow and steady way, the courts are becoming the decisive factor in this controversy. and the conviction of Ehrlichnen is only an example of their power. Within a week or two, before the Judiciary Committee votes whether to bring in articles of impeachment, the Sopreme Court will decide whether the President has to hand over the rest of the tapes and evidence.

That will be the critical moment for all three branches of government judicial, executive and legislative. The first ques-tion lies with the members of the Supreme Court, and it is an ironic accident of history that while they were considering their decision, former Chief Justice Earl Warren died, and the members of the court merched to the selemn music in the Washington Cathedral, and they listened to the appeals for justice and unity in the republic, and former in-tices Abe Fortes and Arthur Goldberg were with them, and one wondered what they thought,

Later we will hear from Chief Justice Burger, as we heard from Judge Gesell in the Ehrichman case, and in the end of this tragedy, the courts are likely to be decisive on what the Congress war against Palestinian must rillas four years ago made him the black sheep of the Arab world is now on a crest of personal influence, backed by quiet but heavy. American support, in the pan-Arab political battle to regain lost territories from Israel including the crecial West Bank of his own kingdom.

While Palestinian nationalist Yassir Arafat insists that only he can represent the "Palestinian people" in the creation of an independent Palestinian state on the Israeli-occupied West Bank it is Hussein who for the moment is in the cat-bird sest.

The doughty King's credentials are becoming clearer every day. As both he and his Prime Minister, Zaid Rifai, carefully ex. plain, there is no such thing as one "Palestinian people" but at least four different "Palestinian peoples." Each has its own special interest and background. There is, first, the East Bank Palestine within Bussein's own kingdom of Jordan, some $00,000 strong including refugees from the West Bank a very large percentage of whom are now integrated into Jordan's econor Next is the Palestine on the West Bank of the Jordan River, numbering about 650,000, who have under Israeli occupation the 1967 war

And Others

Still another "Palestinian people" are the 500,000 refugees now living squalid lives in the refu-gee camps of Syria and Lebanon on a bare subsistence of a few cents a day. Finally, there is the Palestine of Gaza, the small, fertile steip along the Mediter-ranean between Israel and the Egyptian Sinai Peninsula.

One could also add the Palestine within Israel itself-450,000 Araps who kept their homes and jobs after Israel's creation as a state 25 years ago and hold Israeli citizenship thut not real equality with Israeli Jews).

It requires no mental gymnastics to perceive that Arafat's claim as "sole representative" of the Palestinian people is questionable. Indeed, that claim rests primarily with those Palestinians whose ourrage over Israel's successive territorial acquisitions led them into Arafat's Palestinian Liberation Organization along with other more radical nationalist-terrorist outlits. As a ranking Western ambassador told us: Ways all been comied into thinking that the PLO really does represent the Palestinian

Here on the East Bank of his kingdom, evidence is available to buttress Hussein's claim to represent more Palestinians than Arafat, even though Hussein himself is not Palestinian. One example Of the more than 50,000 Palestinian nationalists who fought Hussein when he drove the guerrillss out of Jordan in 1970 and 1971; far more than half are now living peacefully here with jobs and-families. A Center

Moreover, Hussein's 1972 proposal to the West Bank Pales-tinians, now under Israeli occupation, for a United Arab Kingdom-a semi-antonomous West Bank linked to Hussein's East Bank conforms with centuries of political and economic life in the rich Jordan River valley: During 400 years of Turkish rule, the Jordan River was not a boundary but the natural agricultural center of a unified life on both its banks The West Bank city of Nablus, for example, was a provincial capital in the Turkish empire which included the East Bank city of Salt under its administrative control. Today, despite 25 years of Israell independence and 7 years of Israeli occupation of the entire West Bank, there is vir-tually no Best Bank Paleshnian family without relatives across the river on the West Bank.

The main purpose of the Geneva conference is to implement Unit-ed Nations Resolution 242, calling simply for return of territories seized by Israel in 1967, not final political settlement. Since the West Bank was seized from Hussein not Arafat, Hussein is the man to see in Geneva.

With his symmetric Bast Bank

kingdom now in the midst of an economic boom and his relations with both Syrian President Hafes

Assad and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat turning from sour to sweet Hussein is preparing for the critical territorial struggle with Israel ready to convert possible success into a glittering must for use in deciding the eventual political disposition of the West Bank

Li H. Sybil Hathaway, 91, Dame Of Channel Island of Sark

Mrs. Sybil-Hathaway, 91. who had. held feudal dominion over this tiny island off France since 1927, died today

In the 18th century, the island's government was granted special status and powers by Queen Elizabeth I and they survived almost intact to the present day. Sark has no income tar no divorce and no serious crime. Cars are banned but farmers among the 600 inhabitants are permitted to import a limited number of tractors, Dame Sybil defended herself against charges of feudalism by maintaining that she kept the snownt laws and customs "in order to keep Sark a place of peace and quiet."

What was good enough for William the Conqueror is good enough for us," she would say.

Dame Sybil's death at ber home here was announced by her daughter. Her grandson, Michael Beaumont, is heir to La Seigneurie of Sark. In 1940, the Channel Islands

Bonn Plans a Major Tax Cut Next Year to Bar Recession

By Clyde H. Farnsworth

BONN, July 14 INYT !- West German authorities are planning a significant tax reduction next year to increase the purchasing power of consumers and to check the recessionary forces gathering in Europe's biggest ecocomy.

Gen. Spaatz was born in friends and relatives called him

the rest of his life, for no other reason than that he resembled an upperclassman named Toohey.

What Bonn does is of impormaster plan is to spur West German purchases from Commoo Market partners-particularly France, Italy and Britain-and thereby help these countries earn the money they need to pay for higher-priced oil.

"The tax reduction is a certainty-the only question is how it will be distributed." a high Finance Ministry official sald, The Social Democratic government noder Chancellor Helmut Schmidt wants relief exclusively for lower-income and mediumincome groups, but is having getting this coocepi approved in the upper house of parliament, where the Christian Democratic opposition holds a one-vote majority.

Timing Is Vital

Of considerable importance is the timing of the tax cuts, which would pump some $5 billion into the economy. Some economists fear that any premature fiscal move would jeopardize the antiinflation effort, which has already rielded the best results in the 6.9 per cent at an annual late in June, but it is expected that it might turn upward in the fall. Prices elsewhere have been rising at trice the West German rate. Yet, policy is already shifting.

The night credit squeeze of the central hank has been eased in a delicate maneuver aimed at arrested.

preventing recessionary forces from making too much headway while restraining ocw Inflation. As the West Germans work out their parkage, many sectors of the economy have already fallen into a serious slump. The only major growth point, in fact, has been in exports of industrial goods, a fact that is causing dismay and even plarm in both government circles and the ousiness community.

Foreign Workers Leave

The slump, which has caused unemployment to rise above 25 per cent of the work force-a high figure for West Germany-and which has led to the departure of 100,000 of the 2.5 million foreign workers here, has been felt most strongly by the building iodustry and the automoblie makers.

The construction industry is pperaling at less than 60 per cent capacity and many building coorpanies are financially froubled.

Practically all consumer goods are selling slowly, and there has been a marked increase in savings-a $500-million infloa into bank accounts during the last 12 months, compared with a $250million outflow during the preceding 12 months, West Germany's ecolomic strength is in exports, which makes the country particularly vulnerable in any downswing in world business,

U.S. Pros and Cons

The Great U.S. Debate On the Detente Policy

By Bernard Gwertzman

(NYT). - In WASHINGTON (NYT). — In the aftermath of the latest Secretary Moscow conference of State Henry Kissinger bas called for a national debate oo the merits of the Nixon admioistration's detente policy with the Soviet Uoion,

There seems to be oo lack of debaters. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee plans to hold hearings on the subject later this summer and the House Foreign Affairs Committee is wloding up its own sessions on

Those who later detente-a state of international life that has developed in the last three years since President Nixon made his first Moscow journey - say that it contributes to a relaxation of tensions between the world's two most poteot nuclear powers. Differences in ideological policies and economic systems will remain as will continual blg-power rivalry in other parts of the world, they say But, with nuclear confrontation less likely, both societies have had a chance to become more involved with each other in the various fields of science, culture and trade, providing incentives to both sides to maintain the trend toward normal relations.

The critics of detente here view it at an interlude in the continuing struggle hetween the free world and Communism brought about by a Sovict desire to lull the West luto believing that it now less necessary to keep delenses stroog.

Trade Increase

What does the United States get from détente? The advocates see long-term peace as the even-tual divideod. They also eovisage increased trade - which has boomed from $200 million in 1971 to $1.4 billion in 1973—as boosting the Americao economy. The various other exchanges they regard as having a certain symholic importance.

Those unhappy with détente believe the avoidance of direct confrontation has been caused by the U.S. deterrent. They believe detente should oot lead to U.S. arms cuts unless matched closely hy similar verified Soviet reductions. They scoif at the trade figures as a disguised form of ecocomic aid to Moscow: They cite the relatively low rates of interest—6 percent or 7 per cent on government-hacked Export-Import Bank credits, to encourage exports—when U.S. firms had to pay double that for toans at home. Moreover, the Russians, by skillfully playing off various exporters, were able in 1972 to get huge amounts of grain at cheap prices, thereby pushing the price of U.S. grains higher and adding to the country's inflation. What does the Soviet Union get from déteote? Both sides see the Russians as gaining technological know-how in computers. electronics, chemicals and truckbuilding from the West to streamline their economy, Those who boost detente argue that, as a result of this, the Russians are uoder additional pressure to avoid confrontation since demands are huilding up at home for a higher standard of living. The dissenters believe that little this technological assistance has been directed to the civilian sector, most of it being used by the Soviet military to improve missile capabilities.

Chinese Question

Both sides agree that detente also has permitted the Russians to pay more attention to China and less to the West. But they disagree oo whether the Moscow-Washington rapprochement diminishes or increases the chances of a Soviet-Chinese war. The critics say that because détente makes the Western countries less likely to threaten the Russians, it increases the possibility that Soviet military men might seck a confrontation with China.

On the question of who gaios the most from détente, supporters of the policy see shared benefits. Both societies have problems at home and in time of peace both peoples will gain. The supporters also argue that an improved international climate must lead to a liberalization within the Soviet Union, a gain for the United States in the sense that increased personal freedom is a "victory" for Western ideas, Strategically, they say, detente already has led to an increase in U.S. influeoce in the Arab

The critics believe the Russians so far have been the "winners." They argue that nothing fundamental has changed within Soviet society and that in some areas repression seems to have increased. The Russians, they believe, have taken advantage of detente to build up their military

Other, more specific issues also will have to be answered. Some of them: Which side possesses a nuclear advaotage, if any, and is a nuclear advantage possible or eveo desirous when both sides possess such enormous arsenals of missiles and hombers?. Should the United States, with its traditional emphasis on personal freedom, continue cultural and scieotific exchanges with a government which places censorship, travel restrictions and other barriers in the way of its scientists and other intellectuals? Should trade, however beneficial to the U.S. economy, be made conditiooat on Soviet domestic changes? Should the United States become involved in a multihillion-dollar project to exploit the natural gas of Siberia. thereby perhaps finding another source of energy but running the risk of reliance on another forelen power?

Word of Honor

To the Chinese, one's word of hooor is more important thao formal agreements on paper, and they profoundly distrust the Soviet Union for failing to act with integrity. The Chinese have learned from bitter experience that their treaties with the Russians are of little value, and they value the frankness with which Americans have spoken with them. I found that while we both could easily identify a wide rariety of issues on which we could agree, they also respected my frankness when we identified matters on which we disagreed. At no point did ideology prove to be a hindrance to precise com-need for greater unity among the Western allies. They feel deeply that the security of their own area is affected by what happens in the European area, and they are now very forthcoming in encouraging a strong NATO. Beyond this, the Chinese perceive a threat in Soviet involvement on the Indian subcontinent and in the Persian Gulf, particularly Russian pressure on Iran and Pakistan. They are corned by what, to them, seems a limited American understanding the persisting threats to Pakistan's territorial integrity.

Commercial Basis

I was struck by the Chinese spirit of self-reliance-oot only in the matter of security planning but also in their handling of foreign trade. The American people will welcome the news that trade with China is evolving on a solid commercial pasis in contrast to trade with Russia

The Soviet Union, of course, asking for economic benefits which involve the transfer of sophisticated American technology and a massive infusion of American capital. These transactions are supported by U.S. government credits, which are in turn subsidized by the already hardpressed Americao taxpayer so that the Soviets can pay a far lower interest rate than he must pay for any loan. Unlike the Russians, the Chinese are not seeklog such special U.S. taxpayer-subsidized credits.

Two years bave elapsed since the Shanghai communique, issued during Prasident Nixon's visit to China, and we should now be pressing on toward new advances Sino-American relations, including the establishment resident news correspondents in each country, more substantial programs of cultural and educational exchanges and the settle-ment of the assets issue.

Issue of Relations

On the matter of diplomatic recognition, we should try to reverse the location of our embersy and liaison office Taipel and Peking. (The United States has an embassy in Taipel and a liaison office in Peking. and a change of this nature recognition of the People's Republic of China.

In short, I believe we should be moving more rapidly than we are toward a closer relationship between the People's Republic of China and this country. This is in our own self-interest, it is in the self-interest of China and, above all else, it is in the interest of world peace. We must move beyond contacts between a limited number of personalities to a more institutionalized process and a far wider range of relation-

We must grasp this moment in history—when geopolitical considerations have brought our two countries closer together-to build a web of relations which will promote peace, especially as Chica moves ahead to become a nuclear and industrial power.

Subsidies to Plug the Dike for 2 Years

Eastern Europe's Inflation Stopgap

By Dusko Doder.

BUDAPEST (WP). - The countries of Eastern Europe have acknowledged in their current negotiations that the dike they are erecting against Western in-flation will inevitably cave in and that they will be forced soon to increase sharply the prices of raw materials and energy.

But the Soviet bloc nations are determined to maintain their consumer prices at current levels during the next two years through a variety of antiinflationary measures, including large subsidies.

The decision was reported by East European officials and other sources who stressed that consumer price increases were-"politically unacceptable." The expignation of the stand suggests that the Soviet bloc nations want to preclude any political turmoil such as the Polish upheaval sparked by workers riots in December, 1970, against price increases on basic commodities.

Westero inflation will thus be imported into Eastern Europe rithout its effects heing passed oo to the consumer

For the centrally planned economies of Comecon, the East European economic bloc, this will mean severe distortions in domestic price structures during 1974 and 1975. It will also mean some tough and painful bargaining among Comecon experts who are engaged in drafting the next five-year plan, covering the

Hungary's Move

A clear indication of initial price changes was given last month when Hungary announced a series of increases in the prices of raw materials domestic products, rises effective on Jan. 1. Crude oil will double, natural gas will go up by more than 40 per cent, various raw materials in the chemical industries by between 35 per cent and 75 per cent and metals by between 10 per cent and 100 per cent. Under the current five-year plan, the Soviet Union is supplying its East European elients with energy and raw materials at prices negotiated in 1969 and 1970. Despite the recent dramatle increases on world markets, the Russians are committed, for instance, to sell crude our in-Eastern Europe at little over 32 a barrel, or about one-fourth of the current market price, through 1975.

Other Comecon members-East Germany, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Romania and Bulgaria -get most of their energy and raw materials from the Soviet Union. Hungary gets 90 per cent of its fuel and ore from the Soviet Union. The Russians supply 90 per cent of Poland's crude-oil needs and more than 80 per cent of its iron-ore require-

Just what Communist planners intend to do to prevent the inraw materials from being passed on to their consumers in the long run is unclear. But Hungary's anti-inflationary struggle offers an example of short-term strat-

As outlined by officials in interviews last week, the government expects to compe firms for keeping their domestic prices at current levels.

The nation's inflation rate in 1973 was 3.5 per cent and the government has announced that is intends to redoce that figure to 2 per cent this year. A large section of industrial workers was given an 8 per cent pay rise in 1973—and this year municipal and other white-collar workers are scheduled to get raises as Humgarians are extremely fearful something of a world record in this area in 1946. Hungary's galloping inflation then reached such proportions that $1 was being exchanged in Budapest for 54 billion pengos, a unit of the Hungarian currency at the time. The government here has a vested interest in maintaining a solid measure of the economic prosperity that it has achieved through gradual reforms during the last six years.

Politically speaking, we are against inflation, we cannot afford to have inflation because of the impact it would have on wage carners, the workers," Janos Fekete, vice-chairman of the Hungarian National Bank, said in an interview.

"We have been working very hard to establish the people's confidence in the forint is unit of Hungarian currency) and we cannot play with that confidence," he declared. He said that private savings have been increasing and today amount to the equivalent of nearly $3 tillion. Hungary's national budget for 1974 is about $1; billion.

The government this year has allocated $1 billion to subsidise domestic prices of their present levels. Auti-inflationary measures include a cut in tariffs on foreign imports, a reduction in subsidies aimed at stimulating Hungarian exports and two revaluations of the forint thringing it down from last year's rate of 30 forints for

NEW YORK, July 14 (NYT),-The intense pressures in the domestic economy have produced so many fissures in the financial system that the Nixon administration has finally decided to come to grips—publicly—with the whole devestating problem of inflation. It is, in the words of one critic, "high time." Whether it was merely a cos metic gesture, a public relations gimmick or whatever, the fact is that the President brought a blue-ribbon group of the nation's business leaders and economists to the White House last week for a dialogue on infletion and to learn what they thought ought to be done to try to cope with it.

No dramatic announcements or consensus emanated from that lengthy session last Thursday, but seeds might have been sown for some future constructive actions Unfortunately, labor's voice was not solicited nor heard at that high-level discussion, though presumably it will be sought before some expected White House pronouncements on the subject about 16 days hence

To many observers, it has appeared that government officials have been content to sidesten this dangerous issue in recent months, hoping that, somehow, the nagging problem would eventually evaporate without any new ini-tlatives. American economy and the life of the nation's citizens. It was starkly apparent that one of the most critical periods in America's history was at hand.

Soaring interest rates have failed to crest, the bond market has been in a state of chaos, the stock market is gravely ill desplie a closing rally last week, financial institutions are constantly being drained of their assets, numerous businesses and other organizations are facing very serious economic difficulty and public malaise has become widespread, A month ago there were some encouraging signs that inflation might be cobing. Farm prices began to decline, energy costs seemed to be stabilizing at their highly elcvated level, bank-losn demand short-term interest rates actually began to recede a bit. But it appears to have been a felse signal. The storm is not over by any

Yet there are still some reasons for hope. Wholesale prices in June did not rise as sharply as in the previous month. The continued sluggishness in the economy should help to ease infla-tionary pressures, the dollar has appreciated and the price of gold has declined sharply in recent months. But will these trends be

A look back at the cost-of-living index for the last 20 years reveals the extent of the nation's current inflation problem. It was no great concern until the midale scemed to be flattening and some of the last decade, when accelerated commitments in Vietnam (without adequate measures to linance them) started the United States on a progressively worsening inflationary path, except for a fairly brief period after the start of the conomic-controls program in August, 1971.

Following are the annual rates of increase in the cost of living since shortly after the Korean 1965 1.9 It would be inaccurate to place blame for this Boute step-up in the ustion's inflation rate wholly on the administration's shoulders.

In recent years, there has been a huge simultaneous build-up in demand for food and goods of all kinds throughout the world, putting severe pressure on prices, particularly for those commodities in short supply. This surge 1-1 demand was the product of greater affluence in some parts of the world and the desire by many political leaders to provide a better standard of living for their

. On the other hand, Goldman, Sechs, which will be managing the U.S. operation for EDF, believes commercial paper can be placed for one month at between 12 and 12 1/2 per cent on a discounted basis which would represent a significant, saving for EDF on its interest charges.

The average maturity of commercial paper is 30 days but Goldman officials hope to fan enough demand for the notes to stretch the maturities on the EDF notes at least up to nine mouths and is prepared to fit the needs of individual institutional investors by dating the paper for 67 or 93 days, for example, at the request of the investors. The U.S. firm is also proposing to make a market in these notes, assuring investors of the opportunity to sell the notes before maturity if they so desire.

Meanwhile, the Europond market remains paralyzed by the high short-term interest rates: Straight Eurobonds, denominated in dollars and deutsche marks, were off sharply last week. The convertible dollar bond market looked like a disaster area with losses of up to $100 for each

However, given the recent success of the issue denominated in Canadian dollars as well as the good reception investors gave the issue for the Austrian highway authority bankers are planning to launch the first Eurobond denominated in Austrian schillings.

There is a desire, bankers reason, for currency diversification in medium-term instruments. The schilling has been behaving like a strong currency, moving in parallel with the Swiss franc, and bankers think there is sufficient. appeal to launch a schilling loan. The borrower reportedly will be an Austrian state bank, offering 250 million schillings (about $15 million) in eight-year notes at a coupon of around 9 1/2 per cent -in line with the recent DM note:

U.S. Inflation At Crisis Point

(Continued From Page 71 and pushing prices of farm products sharply upward; two devaluations of the dollar in three years and other currency adjustments, and expansionary fiscal and monetary policies in the United States and elsewhere to expand growth and hold down un-

In this country particularly, everyone is now paying the price of excessively liberal spending and credit policies in 1971 and 1972 before the election—to keep the economy moving movard after the mild recession of 1969-70

In an address to a business group last week before his departure for the Middle Bast, Secretary of the Treasury William Simon very deftly pinpointed the reasons for the current "horrendous rate" of inflation in the United States. He said the American people and the government have made the political decisions that triggered hig price increases.

We have increased government spending faster than we have been willing to pay for it through taxation," Mr. Simon said. The nation has also created too much money and new credit "so that more borrowing and investment have taken place than could be financed out of savings," he added. Noting that the demand for goods had been pushed beyond the nation's ability to produce them, the Treasury secretary summed up the situation with an apt phrase that many parents have used when surveying uneaten food on their children's plates: "Our eyes," he said "have been bigger than nur stomach."

In dampen the clamor for so many goods and services tha Federal Reserve Board ought to be curhing credit more directly and more forcefully than it has, It has been relying on a tightmoney policy—high interest rates—to try to moderate the nation's appetite for credit, but that policy has largely failed.

Bank loans have risen to new peaks, and the Fed has remained silent. In past periods of surging demand the Fed has issued warnings to the nation's hanks to curb their lending. Why not now? Why not a public pronouncement from Washington that the banks should refuse loans for some specific, selective nonessential uses or for anticipatory borrowing plans by business to avoid higher costs later on? Why not some-curbs on consumer credit to head off any potential surge in that area? ..

The government has been relying on a single, solitary archaic weapon-high interest rates-to fight a very modern breed of inflation.
It is, indeed, "high time" - to haul in more equipment and more imagination to fight a rampaging fire that seems clearly out of control and threatening even greater distortions and more grievous

Italy Loosening Credit Restraint To Aid Industry

ROME, July 14 (Reuters).-The talian government has decided to relax its credit restrictions immediately to boost employment and heal a serious split between the coalition partners, it was announced yesterday. The Treasury said that 500 hiilion lire ($766.4 million) would be made available for industrial investment in alling small industries and economically ratarded southern regions.

The decision, which must be ratified formally by an interministerial credit committee, was made after a meeting last night between Treasury Minister Emilio Colombo and Guidn Carli, governor of the Bank of Italy.

Earlier the Socialists, members of the three-party governing coalition, threatened to plunge Italy into another government crisis unless credit restrictions were relaxed immediately.

It was a split over credit policy that led to the temporary resignation of the government a month ago.

Borg Tops Panatta In Final at Sweden

BAASTAD, Sweden, July 14 Reuters: Sweden's 18-year-old tennis idol Bjorn Borg won his first Swedish Open, beating Italy's Adriano Panatta 6-3, 6-0, 6-7, 6-3, today in the final.

Panatta rallied strongly in the third set and almost turned the game in his favor after Borg threw away three match points and went on to lose the tieyoungsters to the scene to help with the picketing.

Joe Robbic, the outspoken owner of the Minnu Dolphins, raised the possibility that the entire season could be abandoned, "If the players wipe out the preseason, theo we can't afford to pay each player for the regular season," he said. "This is no longer a strike io the ordinary sense. It is now a mission by the players association to search and destroy."

In Wilmington, Ohio, angry fans made plans for picket lines of their own. They said they would picket in protest against Cincumati players if the veterans set up picket lines outside the Bongals camp.

"I'm fed up," said a fan. "Everyone I know is fed up. Strikes are for people who haven't sensa enough to take care of them-

U.S. Yachts Split 2 Races in Trial To Find Defender

NEWPORT, R.I., July 14 (AP) ---Courageous and Intrepid split two races resterday as the America's Cup observation trials for American 12-meter vachts began on Rhode Island Sound.

In another race yesterday, Southern Cross, the Australian contender, was salled by John Cuneo to a oce-minute victory over her imal horse, Gretel II, in a race off Block Island Saurday.

Gretel II led by 1:55 at the windward mark but Southern Cross, which has an aluminum most, passed its rival on the first reaching leg. The Australians are having trials to see which yacht will face a French contender for the right to meet the Americans.

Courageous came from behind seconds over a 12 1 2-mile triangular course. The race was sailed in a southwest breeza averaging five to seven knots. Intrepld led all the way in the second race and won hy 48 seconds. That race was over a 15.2-mile course which included three legs on the wind and two off the wind. Intrepid, which defended the America's Cup in 1967 and 1970, outsailed the Courageous, a new aluminum boat, on the windward But Courageous proved faster off the wind, especially in very light going.

HOW TRUE

A Skeptic's Guide to Believing the News By Thomas Griffith. Atlantic-Little, Brown. 202 pp. $6.35. Reviewed by Martin Arnold administration. Whatever else these have done, they certainly have created a new interest in the practice of journalism. And a be a sort of super tape recorder new interest, too, in journalists, or camera, mindlessly setting who now may seem either heroes or villains, depending on your near great, or recording happen-politics. Along with the interest, quite naturally has come endless writing on the subject. Some of it, like Woodward and Bernstein's "All the President's Men" and Timothy Crouse's "The Boys on the Bus," has been excellent and important. But most of it has been bad.

Staner it praises the press beyond its worth, or, worse, it's self-conscious and applopetic about the press's role in Watergate and about the press's defense of the First Amendment in the courts. It is as if maybe the press itself believes that all the President's men are right, and the bearer of bad tidings somehow does deserve to be punished. Thomas Griffith, former senior staff editor of Time Inc. publications and the editor of Life in its last years, has written a book that is an exception to the general run of press books. Actually, it's two books in one. The first is a commonsense approach to the press and its problems. The sec-ond, through a rather trite device he calls "Memory Cell," is per-sonal reminiscence. Wo ven through this part are stories of his own newspapering in Seattle and an excellent profile of the one of the few profiles that makes the great publisher a human being, not a caricature. And for those interested in Time-Life trivia, there are plenty of

Most important, however, is his examination of the press, both, of newspapers and television. Griffiths has set out to show how journalists work. Once that is understood then it becomes a relatively simple matter for the newspaper-reader or the television viewer to evaluate for himself the fairness and completeness of the news he is receiving.

At any rate before one swayed by remembrances of former Vice-President Spiro Agnew heaping abuse on the press, one should understand

WATERGATE and the Nixon what journalism is all about, For years, for instance, an accepted truth in this country has been that it is the journalist's job to down the words of the great and ings exactly as they happened, No value judgment allowed. Just present the straight, hard facts, and the readers will make up their own minds.

It is this thinking. Griffith says, that produced the McCarthy era, when most of the press printed the late senator's every lie because, after all, he said it, didn't he? Writes Griffith: "An unaware bias, or a bias denied, is the worst kind. It suggests a lack of imagination, and usually goes with the kind of journalism that isn't doing enough to serve its readers."

What is lacking in the whole ress-Nixon confrontation is an adequate spokesman for the press Griffith is that, for he explains, perhaps for the first time, the difference between a reporter's bias and the slanting of the news. It is for instance true that most correspondents covering the last presidential election campaign favored Scn. George McGovern. As Griffith points out, Agnew thought it enough to label the journalists liberal in order to establish their untrustworthiness.

But the reality was that the liberal group of reporters was the very same that went "in hot pursuit" of McGovern's rather unsavory handling of his running mate's psychiatric problems, and it was that story more than sny that insured the President's landslide. Fairness rather than blind objectivity is the criterion of the journalist's performance.

The subtitle of the book is "A Skeptic's Guide to Believing the News," So while Griffith explains, the press, he also is a critic. He is against advocat; journalism for instance, because he finds that it pays little herd to accuracy. Of television, he says, "What television shows you may be 'true' as a photograph, while false in what it suggests." At one point early in the book Griffith says his "theme is how journalism affects the times it sets out to record." He succeeds admirably in making the reader think about journalism.

The bonus to the book, and a considerable one it is too, is Grifith's ability to use his Luce profile and his own reminiscence, not only to make his point about contemporary journalism but also to keep the book from brooming heavy, and pedantic, which too much of the writing about joproslism is.

CHESS

Paul Keres, the Estonian grandmaster, once remarked that he preferred to play in a style opposite to that of his opponent, Against positional. maneuverers, he would draw on his remarkable talent as a tactician; against tacticians, he would show off the po-sitional side of his play and.

sitional side of his play and his skill in end games.
In so modifying his play, keres claimed that he was satisfying his bent for variety and colorful confrontation, and there is no doubt that these objectives were impor-tant for him. Still, is it merely a coincidence that his self-indulgence contributed mightily toward the very pragmatic purpose of win-ning games? The foxy Keres has always been quite properly admired for throwing his opponents into the situations they like least. There is no doubt that is good strategy, although it. demands that one develop intimate acquaintance with the predilections of hundreds of opponents.

Right Up His Alley

However, even if one should decide that carrying out Keres's positive program is too ambitious a task, it is foolish to grant the opponent the kind of position you know he handles better than you do. Yet that is what the you do. Yet that is what the seasoned campaigner Viktor Korchnol did in the fourth game of his semifinals match with Tigran Petrosian in Odessa. Not surprisingly, he lost, although he came back to take the fifth game for a 3-1 lead with one draw.

Instead of steering the fourth game into the tense channels of steering tactical channels of sharp tactical play in an unbalanced position, Korchnoi gave Petro sition, Korchnoi gaye Petrosian just what he wanted a quiet, symmetrical formation. Perhaps Korchnoi expected 10 Q-N3, which had led to a draw in Benko-Fischer, U.S. championship, 1962-3, but Petrosians 10 R.R.4 around barrier 19 B-B4 proved harder to

Negative Thinking

By Russell Baker

drawer at our house which has not been opened for years. Some years ago, all of us tacitly agreed that we would simply not open the drawer anymore. Its cootents were quietwithout a word being said, sealed out of our lives like friends of long ago who have drifted away on the eddies of life and become strangers. They were of a time that had passed. What the drawer contains are snapshots. A zillion snapshots. I opened it the other day and hundreds of them came tumbling out. They were terrible, most of them. Out of focus. Double exposures. Overexposed. Underexposed. Fading away. And the subject matter. What kind of person could have thought it interesting to photograph a 1956 Chevrolet parked at a hotdog stand? The answer is painful. Here is a hlurred black cat skulking under a red metal lawn chair; a close-up of what appears to be a small fish tank but might be the underside of a sink; a rowboat at the edge of what could be either a lake or any empty parking lot.

We used to take these snapshots with a zeal that must have warmed many a heart at Eastmao Kodak. It was considered important to preserve your life's great moments so you could relive them in the serenity of your dotage, and I suppose this is still done by persons of a certain age, some of whom may even take good pictures. It is a mistake.

Looking at these people standing around in oceans, having their diapers changed, blowing out birthday candles, gazing at the Tower of Loudon, cutting the wedding cake, dozing at the New Year's Eve party—one sees that they are all wrong, even on the rare occasions when they are in clear focus and well lighted.

The men have too much hair and are too lean and hard. The women's eyes lack wisdom. The

Swiss Plan to Ration Electricity in Winter

BERN, July 14 (UPI).-The Swiss government said that it plans to ratioo electric power this winter to cut consumption by 10 to 20 per cent.

Officials said rationing plans ar: being made because water reservoirs are at a low level, the nucleur power plant program is behind schedule and power imports are restricted because other nations are suffering from the

Restrictions are expected oo the use of electric heating systems, air conditioning, private saunas and indoor swimming pools,

NEW YORK,—There is a secret old people look middle-aged and dynamic and the babies look so alarmingly alike that it is hard to tell one from another.

You remember most of these people well enough to know they never, never looked like these representations in the snapshots. Or did they? A sad possibility, that. Too sad to be acceptable, regardless of the photographic industry's claim that the camera doesn't lie.

These are not life's great moments preserved, but only life embalmed, all the juices drained, the glory gone to dust. The picture of an arrow snapped in flight, frozen forever against the sky, conveys nothing of this great moment in the arrow's existence: and it is just as useless to try to capture life in the frozen instant of the camera shutter's

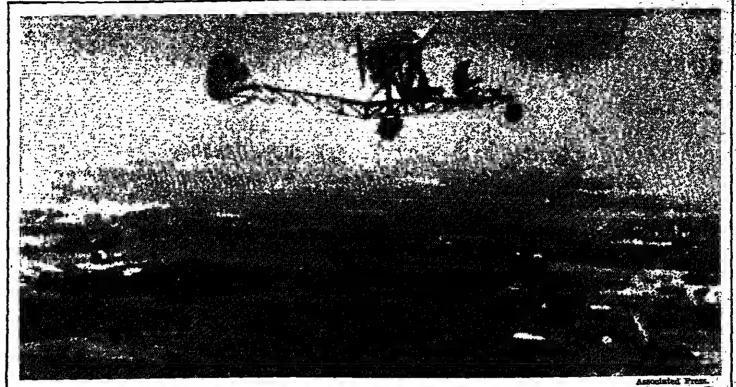

Fine photographers who are artists occasionally succeed; but most of us, when we get behind the camera, are doomed to be embalmers. What we can do, however, is take great pictures in our heads and not only take them, but store them so that they improve with the years.

We can add color, movement. emotion, feel, taste, sound and even smell. What's more, as the years go by, we can, and usually do, edit and improve them. I have one of these snapshots taken years ago of some bollybocks in my grandmother's yard Not only does it show the pink of the flowers, in tints at least as lovely as they were on that distant summer day, but it also con-tains the incredible blue of the sky-sometimes the sky is filled with glistening cumulus clouds, other times it is the purest blue -as well as the hum of a bumble hee, the distant rumble of a threshing machine, the smell of wild roses on the fence, the purple outline of the mountains in the distance and, behind me, for this camera can also photograph through 360 degrees, the lordly porch of my grandmother's great house.

This is a splendid snapshot. Am I to believe that this is the way it really was, or should I accept this more recent camera version which tries to tell me that my grandmother's house was only a small gray dilapidation and her front yard a small plot overgrown with weeds?

So we put the cameras away after a while and closed the drawer. I opened it the other day only because of a momentary urge to neaten things up by sorting out the pictures and throwing away all but a few.

The job would have taken all day and I quit after 20 minutes. An entire day spent with pictures that treat people as those snapshots do would have been intolerable. So, I went to the back yard, sat down, and took some beautiful scenes of the sunlight filtering through the elm tree and felt better right away.

A British Institution Reveals Its Names

By Bernard D. Nossiter

ONDON (WP).-The Times Laterary Supplement, one of Britain's most respected and mustiest institutions, has broken with tradition: It is now putting by-lines on its book

In country vicarages, where the gray, unchanging face of the TLS has had an almost biblical authority for 72 years, the change is taken as another signpost of a decadent age. "The essential virtue of anonymity is that it encourages objectivity," a reader sternly wrote. "The class of men who have written throughout the years for TLS have been concerned primarily with the truth of what they were saying. This is a most precious characteristic which I deeply regret to learn it is not to be your policy to encourage."

But for John Gross, the formidably bright erudite journalist-academic who has just become the weekly's fourth editor, signed reviews are only one of several changes he plans to give the TIS an impact equal to its respectability.

Nearly everyone who writes in Britain reads the TLS, largely for its encyclopedic range. In a typical issue, say the one of last Sept. 14, 71 books are reviewed. There is a 3,000-word critique of the limits-of-growth school and pieces on a new edition of Dante, a Clement Greenberg book on art, Graham Greene's "The Honorary Consul." "Metternich und Die Frage Ungarns," "The Library and Muniments of Ely Cathedral," and "Sex and Marriage in Utopian Communities."

A Clearinghouse

As Mr. Gross says, the TLS has been a place where "serious books could expect a serious review, a clearinghouse for academic publications, where coverage is the uniquely distinctive

"I am not proposing to change this, but shift the emphasis. IIS is a great purveyor of information, though in some ways. it has been a staid and dusty institution, an annex to the

At 39, Mr. Gross's own academic credentials are impeccable. He has taught English at London University, been a fellow of King's College, Cambridge, and written a much-praised history of British reviews. "The Rise and Fall of the Man of Letters."
His own book, however, barely mentions the TLS and conspicuously omits it from a list of other journals, also founded in the Edwardian era, that became literary forces in its reviews have been dull and hadly written. It has often neglected or been condescending toward significant developments in the arts. It will publish the definitive piece on Croatlan poetry, but a characteristically early verdict on

Picasso's cubism decided that it "is merely a tiresome effort to escape from the commonplace by means of a formula."

Mr. Gross has already begun to find brighter and more opical articles. A recent issue has a sparkling review of Tom Stoppard's new play, "Travesties," written by Richard Elman, the Joyce biographer. A front-page headline quietly boasts of letters from Mary Renault and P. W. Bateson.

Despite this new emphasis on personality, Mr. Gross insists that he will not turn the TLS "into a flashy, vaudeville show." Some of his donnish readers think this is an apt description for The New York Review of Books," a paper Mr. Gross admires and for which he has written. He intends to keep that definitive piece on Croatian poetry.

demanding, however, that it be lucidly written "for the general reader." But he will also find space for the lively arts, for articles on television, the West End theater and journalism. From its beginning, the TLS has enjoyed a following in the United States, drawn in part perhaps by the (anonymous) reviews of Dennis Brogan and Henry James. But the American audience has fallen off and the paper now sells only about 10,000 of its 38,000 copies there.

"I want to mend bridges with America," Mr. Gross said, "by covering more subjects people want to hear about, by bringing in more American contributors."

Seduction List

"I have jotted down an ideal list of those I would like to seduce," he said. But he will not seek names for names' sake, adhering to the TLS tradition of finding a reviewer for a particular book rather than the other way around. He is sensitive to the arguments that imposed anonymity on

TLS reviewers for nearly four generations. "It is supposed to insure fair-mindedness and an absence of exhibitionism. It focuses attention on the review, not the reviewer." The unsigned review also enabled a young academic to discuss uninhibitedly the work of an older colleague, no light matter in the tightly knit world of British universities where promotion often depends on the good will of a few established men.

But Mr. Gross is convinced that the case for signed reviews is overwhelming. "There is a moral argument," he said. People ought to be accountable for what they write.

"If you risk exhibitionism, you save yourself the feuds and rendeltas that were conducted under the clock of anonymity. "This paper should not have a political line, but keep open bouse for the left, center and right. But a political piece, should be identified by its author, I have a responsibility for choosing X or Y to write a review, but I don't have a total responsibility for everything he says.

"The signed review will also bring us people who would not otherwise write for TLS.

"Finally, it makes for greater liveliness."

Candidate Figures It Helps to Be Crasy

The former James L. Gron, 2 Milwaukee used car dealer whose name has been legally changed to Crazy Jim, will be running for governor under the new name this November.

Crazy Jim's name change created some confusion at Milwaukee County Circuit Court. Your first name is going to be 'Crazy' and your last name is going to be 'Jim'?" Judge Leander J. Foley asked. "Currect," replied Jim, noting that he operates a firm called Crasy Jim Motors.

Besides the used car business Crasy Jim, 40, operates a fruit stand in south Milwankee and promotes demolition derbies. He will file as an independen in the Wisconsin gubernatorial race with a platform calling for egalizing gambling and a state lottery. State election administrator

Lee Fahey said he knew of no regulation barring the name. "If that's what he wants to be called," said Fahey, "I guess we'd have to put it on the ballot." ...

Joan Sutherland returned toher home town of Sydney Soturday night for the first time in nine years and was wildly ap-planded by 1,500 fans for her performance in "Tales of Hoffmann." Miss Suiberland, who started her career 25 years ago singing at weddings for $6 a performance, opened the city's opera sesson hefore an andlence that paid up to $500 a seat. She and husband Bichard Bonyage were made honorary life members of the Australia Opera Company after the show.

Vice-President Ford celebrated his flat birthday yesterday with his family in Washington after returning from San Clemente, Calif., where he had talks with President Nixon Saturday.

Pone Paul VI, looking rested and recovered from an attack of arthrosis in his right knee, made his regular Sunday appearance to address: a crowd in St. Peter's Square. He is expected to leave at midweek for his summer residence of Castel Gandolfo, south of Rome.

Capt. Mark Phillips, lauband of Princess Anne, was injured Sat-urday while riding in a show-jumping competition at Tethury. England. Phillips pulled up in pain, apparently with a pulled back muscle, after clearing an obstacle on a third attempt after. his horse, Barleburn, twice balked. He completed the course in obvious discomfort and was later driven to his parents' home not far from the course. * * *
